Little Foxy is Rich

Little Foxy and his parents moved to another forest.

"We're too old to move," Grandpa sighed, "and who would care for my apple orchard?"
"We'll scarcely ever see Foxy now," Grandma also lamented. "He'll learn the new forest's language and forget all about us."

Foxy did soon learn the local language, which helped him make new playmates. But he still spoke the old forest's language with his parents. He never wanted to forget it.

One day, Foxy went to visit his grandparents.
He and Grandma enjoyed a long hug.

Grandpa and Foxy sailed a toy boat together. "Oh, my bushy tail!" Grandma exclaimed that evening. "He's still our same little Foxy."

"By Jove – I'll eat every last apple if he isn't just one language richer," said Grandpa.
